Skills recognition service

Skills recognition or recognition of prior learning (RPL) is a process that recognises your current skills and experience, regardless of where and when the learning occurred. The process acknowledges any combination of formal or informal training and education, work experience, or general life experience that equates to nationally-recognised competencies.

This is a way to have your skills recognised without the need to undertake formal training in areas where you are already competent. The Skills Recognition Officer can help you with all aspects of the skills recognition process from the stages of enquiry through to enrollment and assessment.

The skills recognition service is located at Wodonga TAFE's main campus.
